Description

At the “Fresh-Denim Highschool” a group of female friends heard a rumor of a boy likes one of the girl in the group, as the group of friends try to find the answer to this rumor they began asking everyone on the school and write if there is a Clue on who the boy might be. They write the clue in a piece of paper and put it inside their bag, the girl who is being rumored said she only need 5 clue to guess who the boy might be. but, due to not everyone in the school know who this boy might be they might also give a “No Clue” as an answer. To make things easier the girl can use the command “Out” to take out the paper that is placed on top and a command to count the clue called “Count them”, if the girl somehow take out the important Clue it will give an output “I'm going crazy, right?”, if the amount of clue is sufficient (more than 5 or equal to 5), print “He's the one that's living in my system”, if the amount of clue is not enough, print “They keep on asking me, "Who is he?"”. That way the girl checks her bag using Last In First Out (LIFO).

Input Format

The first line consists of N, a number that defines the amount of paper inside the girl's bag. The next N lines are the paper inside. The next line is the amount of commands will be instructed by the girl defined by M. The next M lines are the Commands from the girl.

Constraints
